

Bed of Faith
by Nishaun Smith

There came a man one day to his death bed. All his life he had planned to confess his vices then. He had liked his life he did not want to sleep. It was time though, time for the end. So he asked God to prepare to listen to his many apologies and regrets. As he was about to finish his lamentations, the adversary came and said, "If you have much faith why not ask for more days between you and the last, can you not ask to be forgiven at that time?"
