

How many evolutionists does it take...

by Nishaun Smith

Sadly, we will never know, the evolutionists embarked on a life or death struggle to decide who would be the fittest to screw in a light bulb. A violent campaign of murder and mayhem left few survivors. And of those that survived not many were able to even move their arms, much less their broken legs. The light bulb was also smashed in the ensuing chaos. The electric company turned off the power because no one bothered to get a productive job. Police were even called to break up this naziesque behavior. The neighbors were left disheartened because of this mischief and started to lock their doors, even refusing to bring their children to the playgrounds. Property values started to decline as criminals prowled the unlit streets. The lights of human civilization began to fade as the lights of the cities burned out. This left many to ponder why they allowed God's light in the hands of evolutionists.
