

Pyramid
by Nishaun Smith

Evolution is an upside-down pyramid, intentionally. Evolutionists attempt to build a theory where less complex creatures grow into more complex creatures (sometimes you evolve blindness but still a one-celled organism has to eventually create a human brain, without a womb, until it evolves one). Evolution then is in fact a gain in complexity or energy increase or pattern increase. Because all patterns can be defined mathematically (not-genetic patterns, physical ones, like patterns in the brain or a skyscraper or a river.) A less complex pattern creating a more complex pattern is impossible, by definition. There is no evolution¹ in mathematics or even a random number, those are mathematical myths or legends.

The funniest part about this upside-down pyramid of evolution is that it has no apex. It's floating! This is because the evolutionists completely ignore this problem. They created a whole new science call abiogenesis to try to define how the first rock evolved the first DNA strand under relatively natural circumstances. The abiogenesis people, from whatever deep dark laboratory they are hiding in, have stated that super complex DNA evolved from slightly less complex RNA. They are worth their weight in intelligence! We never see or hear these people but the evolutionists promise they exist.

1.) In mathematics evolution is when you find the root of a number.
