

Submission
by Nishaun Smith

The word 'islam' is literally defined as submission; as a metaphor, submission is an excellent way to understand why Islam is a folly. We can see this by using a metaphor from the Bible. Many times the one and only God compares his church to a pure woman being made ready for her wedding to Christ. (Note, it is the church that marries Christ not a nun, as you may have been taught.) It is true that wives should submit to husbands but submission is not the very name or the definition of the relationship. A good portion of the submission is natural because women are naturally weaker, so a woman does not have to act submissive or as an ingénue. Some men try to force submission on women, this is an act of cruelty. Similar to this, Islam has no loving relationship, it is simply about submission to the random will of God. Even though Christianity has rules we should understand that these are a testament to God's love. That is to say, Christians should stay away from unclean things because they know that if a loving God declares something unclean then that must be in an attempt to protect us. It is good to remember that King David said, God help me to follow your laws, that I may live. While Muhammad states, God help me to submit to your laws, so I may impress you. Christians do not have to wear fancy clothes or makeup to get God's attention, as in some religious traditions.
